

ANTHROPOLOGY MAJOR (B.A.)

<https://cola.unh.edu/anthropology/program/ba/anthropology-major>

Description

Anthropology asks the question: What does it mean to be human? We answer this fundamental query with a global perspective on the human condition as students explore both the similarity and diversity of human experience. Through courses that cover a wide range of societies throughout the world, we investigate the human condition, past and present. Introductory courses provide an overview of the fields of anthropology: social and cultural anthropology, archeology, physical anthropology and linguistics. More advanced courses provide the opportunity for students to pursue intensive study of particular topics in cross-cultural perspective. The department emphasizes critical thinking and writing skills and encourages close faculty/student contact in seminar courses and at the upper level. Students, in consultation with their academic adviser, have the opportunity to take courses in other departments that complement specific foci in anthropology.

At this time of increasing globalization, anthropology provides students with a broad overview of diverse peoples and cultures. Majors are therefore well prepared to live in a rapidly changing world. The major both prepares students for graduate-level studies and serves as a foundation for a wide range of careers. With backgrounds in anthropology, our students become teachers, social workers, public policy experts, forensic investigators, health practitioners, primatologists, international business executives, and community and economic development specialists, as well as pursuing various other careers.

To declare a major in anthropology, students must have completed at least one introductory level anthropology course at the 400 or 500 level with a grade of C or better.

Additional Information

Students declaring the major in anthropology are expected to make steady progress toward fulfillment of major requirements. Typically, this means taking at least one ANTH course per semester until all of the requirements have been met. Very rarely, and only in specific circumstances such as a complex transfer of ANTH-related credits from another school, will an exception to this policy be made and only in student consultation with their advisor.

Candidates for any UNH degree must satisfy all of the University Discovery Program requirements in addition to satisfying the requirements of each individual major program.

Discovery Program Requirements

Anthropology majors may use one major-required ANTH course to satisfy one Discovery category requirement. These only include: ANTH 411, ANTH 412, ANTH 415, ANTH 500, or ANTH 501.

Capstone Requirement

The Capstone Requirement for the anthropology major also fulfills the Discovery Capstone Requirement, and it must be fulfilled in a Seminar format in any one the following courses: ANTH 750, ANTH 785, or ANTH 797. Students may not substitute ANTH 700 or ANTH 795, ANTH 796 courses for their Capstone Requirement, although these can count as electives for the major.

Bachelor of Arts Language Requirement

Anthropology majors must also satisfy the UNH Bachelor of Arts Language requirement. Anthropology majors may take American Sign Language to satisfy the language requirement.

Interdisciplinary Dual Majors or Minors

Many anthropology majors choose to pursue interdisciplinary dual majors or minors at UNH that cross-list ANTH courses, including Justice Studies (JUST), Humanities (HUMA), Sustainability (SUST), International Affairs (IA), Global Studies (GS), and Forensics. Up to eight credits of ANTH courses (normally two courses) will be permitted to count toward both the anthropology major and the dual major program. Students must carefully plan ahead with their advisors in both majors. Up to one (1) course, internship, or experience not based in Anthropology may be counted as an elective for the Anthropology major, and only with the approval of the student's advisor and department chair.

Study Abroad

Students are also encouraged to explore study abroad options through the UNH Global Education Abroad office. Anthropology majors may acquire up to eight credits (normally two courses) toward their major requirements while studying abroad. Additional courses can be accepted for general credits at UNH. Majors must complete ANTH 513 or ANTH 514, ANTH 611, and their 700-level Senior Seminar on-campus. These cannot be completed on study abroad.

Internships

Internships (ANTH 700, 1-4 credits) and independent study courses (ANTH 795 / ANTH 796, 1-4 credits) are supervised primarily by a faculty member and are developed mutually between a student and faculty. Students should have previously taken at least one course with them, and unless faculty have a grant or an external funding partner, internships for credit that are primarily directly by faculty are not paid. To support their research and supplies related to internships or independent studies, students should seek out opportunities from the Hamel Center for Undergraduate Research. Students are encouraged to meet with UNH Career and Professional Success (CaPS) to explore paid, pre-professional internships with organizations outside of UNH, such as local businesses, nonprofits, and government agencies. Additionally, students should contact a faculty member to discuss the possibility of receiving academic credit or secondary supervision for their internship.

Honors-in-Major

An Honors-in-Major option is available and separate from the Hamel Honors & Scholars College options. Honors-in-Major requires completion of ANTH 699 Senior Thesis. Students who decide to undertake Honors-in-Major take ANTH 699 Senior Thesis for two semesters for eight credits total, but this only counts as one ANTH 600-level elective toward their degree. Exceptions may be made for undertaking Hamel College-related Honors Senior Thesis (ANTH 699H Honors Senior Thesis) which is supervised by Anthropology faculty but may be taken once for four credits. Please consult with both the Hamel Honors & Scholars College directors and your Anthropology advisor.

Student Learning Outcomes

Program Learning Outcomes

- Demonstrate ability to conduct anthropological research: to collect primary and secondary source data in the observation, documentation, or excavation of human actions, languages, remains, and or material artifacts.
- Master the ability to write with an anthropological lens: to critically analyze data with respect to historical and current anthropological theories and perspectives, and to construct persuasive arguments.
- Exhibit skills in presentation of anthropological research: in writing (ethnography, technical reports, and other genres), inter-personal and public speaking, and or data visualization (graphic illustration, exhibition, mapping, or modeling, for example).
- Demonstrate the knowledge or ability to collaborate with research partners and communities as part of a commitment to public, applied, engaged, or activist anthropology and archaeology.
- Demonstrate the ability to think comparatively about diversity and inequality across the global as well as within a specific social context, and to apply anthropological methods, perspectives, and theories to the world around them.
